Synastry compares two natal charts: the planets of one on the points of the other (cross aspects), the planets of each in the houses of the other, and the composite chart, the chart "of the bond" built from midpoints. It does not say whether a relationship will work: it says where it is easy and where it asks for work.

The balance of the couple

Field	Harmony	Tension	Fusion	Verdict	In words
Emotional understanding	0	0	1	light and shade	you understand each other on much, but some needs stay unanswered unless spoken
Attraction and desire	2	2.5	1	light and shade	real attraction with some friction on timing and ways
Communication	2.5	2.5	0	light and shade	you enjoy talking, but on some subjects you reason in opposite ways
Stability and duration	0	0	0	little involved	stability is not written in the aspects: it depends on choices
Growth and shared luck	1	3.5	1	light and shade	you encourage each other, with some exaggeration
Transformation and depth	1.5	3.5	1	light and shade	deep and intense, with moments when control or confusion must be recognised

Each aspect counts 1 (1.5 if within 2°). Harmony = trines and sextiles; tension = squares and oppositions; fusion = conjunctions, which unite but can also overwhelm. A "delicate" field is not a sentence: it is where the bond asks for work.

In order of increasing orb; in bold, aspects within 2°. Orbs: conjunction and opposition 8° (10° with Sun or Moon), trine and square 7°, sextile 5°, quincunx 3°; with Ascendant and Midheaven 5° (sextile 3°); with Node, Chiron and Lilith 4° (sextile 3°). A = applying, S = separating.

The composite chart is built from the midpoints between the planets of the two charts (and between the Ascendants and Midheavens), with Equal houses from the composite Ascendant: it describes the bond as a "third person". Its Sun tells the purpose of the couple, the Moon the climate at home, Venus and Mars how you love each other, Saturn what holds it together.
